Doing Time in Lesbian History

Wednesday, September 20, noon-2 in Scripps Cottage

What do we learn from looking at the intersecting histories of incarceration and lesbianism in the United States – about prisons and closets, about sexuality and social change?

Estelle Freedman is the Edgar E. Robinson Professor in U.S. History at Stanford University, where she co-founded the undergraduate Program in Feminist, Gender, and Sexuality Studies. She earned her Ph.D. in U.S. history at Columbia University and her focus is on the history of women, feminism, and sexuality.
